Batch Identification & Shelf Life

Evercoat products are identified with their original batch code and date of manufacturing that includes: the year, the month and the specific production batch. The batch code is located on the bottom part of the product label or underneath the bottom of the container.

Example 1: 703622

Year – Month – batch

7      03      622

2017 March Batch

Example 2: 711437

Year – Month – batch

7      11      437

2017 November Batch

“Best Used By” Guidelines

Listed below, are approximate shelf life guidelines for each specific product. Evercoat quarantines one full retain sample of each batch. These retain samples are stored in a climate controlled environment and are available for inspection should a quality issue arise. There are several factors that may affect shelf life stability but storage climate has the greatest impact. Cool storage climate extends product shelf life where as warm storage climate decreases product shelf like.

Products stored in climate controlled or cool environment will most likely perform within their specification beyond the “SHELF LIFE” date. When a product is suspect to be unfit for use, it will typically show physical signs of defect and or will be difficult to use, therefore should be discarded.
